

The Destruction of the Christian Tradition: Updated and Revised

By Rama P. Coomaraswamy

For all students of the history of Christianity, and especially Catholics, this work traces a journey through a labyrinth of error and deception to a fountain of peace, beauty, and salvation, which flowed without ceasing for generations of believers during the last two thousand years.

Concentrating in detail on the post Vatican II revisions of its doctrinal teachings, this book tells the story of the betrayal and destruction of the Roman Catholic tradition.

- ❖ Dr. Rama Coomaraswamy outlines the descending course of events which lead the Church hierarchy to revise, or reject, doctrines and sacraments.
- ❖ These discontinued practices had illuminated the lives of centuries of saints and led centuries of the faithful to God.

What others have said about this book

“Brilliantly written and fully documented. The author shows clearly at what point, according to strictly traditional Catholic doctrine, obedience becomes a sin, and at what point authority, even that of a Pope, becomes null and void.”

— Martin Lings in Ancient Beliefs and Modern Superstitions

“The good doctor [Rama Coomaraswamy] demonstrates in a compelling way that ours is a Catholic heritage that is truly precious. This book deserves to be disseminated far and wide.”

— Rev. Father Clarence J. Kelly, Superior, Society of Pius X

“This is a really definitive work on the subject—a subject we have all talked about without really pinning it down.”

— Mary Martinez, Vatican Correspondent

“Well written, with great care taken in documentation and precision, this book should serve as a beacon to guide those lost in the Post-Conciliar confusion. It will also clarify the perspective and strengthen the faith of those who remain within the Traditional Church.”

— Michael King, Studies in Comparative Religion

World Wisdom

Additional Publication Information

The Destruction of the Christian Tradition contains:

- ❖ A Foreword by Bishop Robert F. McKenna, O.P.;
- ❖ A Preface to the Second Edition by Rama P. Coomaraswamy;
- ❖ An Introduction by Bishop Thomas C. Fouhy;
- ❖ An Addendum on Benedict XVI ;and
- ❖ Biographical Notes.

The publication date is March 31, 2006 and the estimated retail price is $28.95. The Destruction of the Christian Tradition is approximately 456 pages.

About the Author: Rama P. Coomaraswamy

Dr. Rama P. Coomaraswamy, son of the renowned scholar, Ananda Coomaraswamy, holds degrees from both Oxford and Harvard. He was the professor of Ecclesiastical Studies at Thomas Aquinas Seminary and has written The Invocation of the Name of Jesus and The Problems with the New Mass, as well as many articles about Christianity. He lives with his wife in Wilton, Connecticut.

About the Author of the Foreword: Bishop Robert F. McKenna

Bishop Robert F. McKenna was initially a Dominican monk who objected to the changes in the beliefs and practices of the Church that were introduced by Vatican II and its aftermath. He was associated with the Orthodox Roman Catholic Movement, a group of 14 priests who shared similar attitudes, from its inception. Due to his refusal to say the new mass or Novus Ordo Missae, he was forced to leave the Dominican monastery. McKenna then established himself in Monroe, Connecticut, and was consecrated a bishop by Gerard de Laurier.

About the Author of the Introduction: Bishop Thomas C. Fouhy

Bishop Thomas C. Fouhy was born in New Zealand in 1908 and was ordained in 1943. He was responsible for teaching many in the United States the proper manner of saying the Tridentine Mass and traveled throughout the world in defense of the traditional Catholic faith. He was consecrated in the Thuc line in France in 1993 and subsequently functioned as a traditional Catholic bishop.